

A YEAR IN REVIEW

BOCEPHUS

Bocephus was lost in the floods in Louisiana and then had a string of bad luck. He almost drowned and then was hit by a car. He broke 2 legs in several places. He had major surgery to fix the broken bones. He then had to find a place to recover. He came to OFOSA and he is now fully healthy with a retired K-9 officer in Vancouver, Washington.

DOORSTEP DROP-OFFS

In the morning when we get OFOSA we sometimes get an unexpected surprise... or four. These kittens were left in a tub on our doorstep, cold and terrified. We took them in, gave them a little TLC and they are now warm and happy growing up in one of OFOSA's many foster homes waiting for their purrfect family to come along.

BRANDY

Unfortunately, with the good, sometimes comes the sad. Brandy and her littermates were orphaned after their mom died shortly after giving birth to unknown causes. After many weeks with her very loving foster, Brandy became very suddenly ill, showing signs of distemper. Tests confirmed the worst and we sprang into action, sending her up to Seattle with her foster to receive the treatment we hoped would save her. She fought hard, we fought with her, we had so many rooting for her and supporting her but sadly, she left us. Though her time was short, we were able to show her all the love we could while she was with us.

PENELOPE

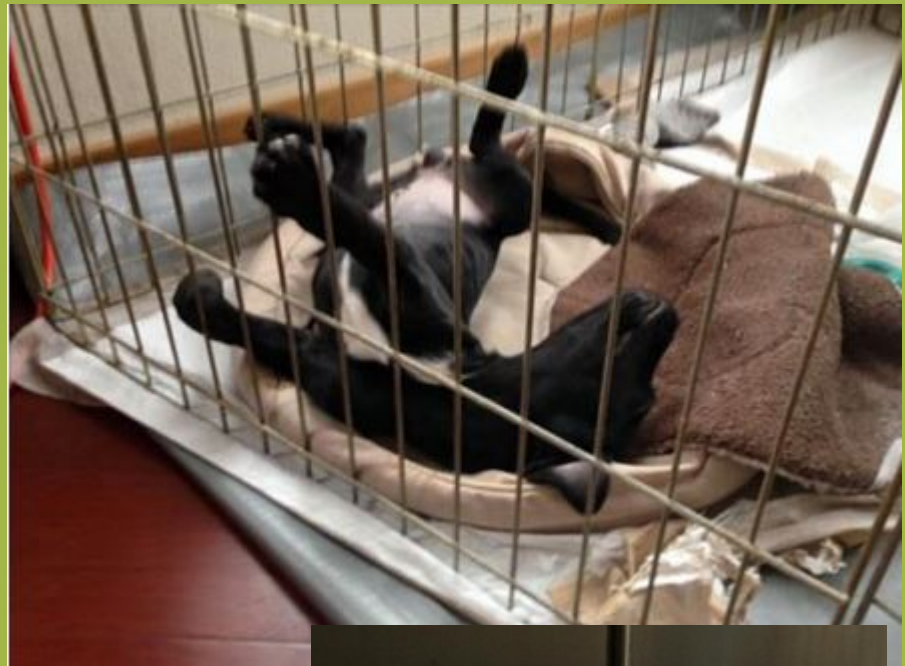

Penelope came to us from California. She developed Parvo shortly after arriving. Our medical staff battled hard to save her life with 24 hour monitoring and treatments happening around the clock. We fought and won! Penelope made a full recovery and is now in a new home with her big sister loving life. Without OFOSA she would not be here today.

TATUM

Tatum came to OFOSA as a happy, healthy puppy. Soon after arriving, however, he began failing quickly. It was discovered that he had developed an intestine problem called an intussusception. OFOSA was able to provide Tatum the life saving surgery and recovery support he needed to survive. He is now in his loving forever home, again, a happy, healthy pup.

FOSTER HOMES BECOME HOSPITALS

LOUISIANA FLOODS

OFOSA
WAS CALLED TO HELP, AND WE ANSWERED

Louisiana was once again hit hard by a natural disaster. Many people and pets were displaced and found themselves homeless. We got the call and responded by rescuing 153 animals.

MOMS & BABIES

Mama & Pups

Daisy & her 8
puppies

Sadly, the most at risk
animal in a high kill shelter is moms with babies.
OFOSA takes in about 500
litters a year.

Chi chi and fam

Sweet mama & her three pups,
Huey, Dewey & Louie.

Meeka & Babies

ORPHANS

Another at risk animal in a high kill shelter is orphan babies.

They have weak immune systems and need around the clock care. OFOSA takes in many of these a year and has a strong network of fosters that are up to the task that others were not.

MEDICAL CARE

OFOSA offers veterinary services for our shelter animals. We do preventative care, medical care, and surgical services at both our on campus clinic as well as with our veterinary partners that help us with emergencies and medical cases that require special attention or equipment.
